

ABSTRACT

An electric cooking apparatus for easily converting a pot to a deep fryer or boiler includes a housing having an elongated heating element attached thereto. The heating element includes an upper portion with a cover mounted thereon. An adjustable bracket secures the device to the upper rim of the pot. A safety switch enables the heating element only when the device is properly mounted. The position of the heating element may be adjusted so that the device can be easily used with various sized pots.